CIRCULAR N° 000022 /C/CCAA/DG of 2 5 NOV 2020

Laying down specifications for the presentation of the electronic Aeronautical Information Publication (eAIP)

TABLE OF CONTENTS

TABLE OF FIGURES

1. INTRODUCTION

The purpose of this Circular is to provide acceptable means of compliance (AMC), among others, to establish compliance with the regulations and guidance material (GM) to support the interpretation of the regulations.

This Circular, by itself, does not establish, change or modify regulatory requirements or permit any violation, nor does it establish minimum standards.

1.1. Subject

(1)   The CCAA eAIP Specification is written to accompany the transition from AIS to AIM in Cameroon. Its purpose is to specify how AISPs in Cameroon can ensure that aeronautical information is made available to the next intended user in a way that allows content and format of those documents to be directly readable on a computer screen.

(2)   This aeronautical information includes the Aeronautical Information Publication (AIPs), AIP Amendments (AMDTs), AIP Supplements (SUPs) and Aeronautical Information Circulars (AICs).

1.2. Applicability

(1)   The eAIP refers to the AIP in electronic form that enables it to be visualised on a computer screen. This eAIP specification is therefore intended to provide requirements for the presentation of the eAIP only. Requirements associated with how the eAIP is produced, exchanged, and provided are excluded from this Specification.

(2)   This CCAA eAIP specification defines detailed requirements, recommendations, and a possible MoC for the aeronautical data and aeronautical information within the AIPs, AMDTs and SUPs to be made available, as a minimum: "in a way that allows the content and format of the documents to be directly readable on a computer screen. It covers the visual presentation of the eAIP. This includes the AIP, AMDTs, SUPs and AICs.

(3)   The presentation of charts including the text on these, is excluded from the CCAA eAIP specification. Charts need to comply with the International Civil Aviation Organisation (ICAO) Annex 4 [RD 8]

(4)   This eAIP specification is not intended to support digital Notice to Airmen (NOTAM) process, as digital NOTAM require a database of aeronautical information and is thus not reliant on the eAIP.

(5)   Data quality requirements for the data provided in the eAIP are not covered by this CCAA eAIP Specification.

(6)   The requirements for the possible MoC specified in this CCAA eAIP

Specification are included in appendix 3. They comprise mandatory requirements, as well as recommendations and optional elements, the implementation of the latter two being optional.

4.   CONTEXT

(1)   The eAIP plays an important role in the national plan for the transition from AIS to AIM conceived and adopted by the CCAA. This specification represents the first project (P11-1) of step 11 (P11) in phase 2 -- going digital.

(2)   The eAIP is considered as a tool that will bring more quality, efficiency and economy in the provision of Aeronautical Information Services (AIS).

(3)   The CCAA in a bid to ensure harmonisation, interoperability and coordination in the implementation of eAIP has put forward in this document the specifications for the presentation of the eAIP.

(4)   This specification is designed to enable the harmonised visualisation of the contents of the AIP, which has to be provided by the national Aeronautical Information Services (AIS) in accordance with the ICAO Convention on International Civil Aviation, in electronic form.

(5)   In the Cameroonian context, the CCAA aims to use this eAIP specification as a tool to increase and standardise the use of automation in AIS by promoting electronic versions to replace the current paper-based elements of aeronautical information products.

5.   INTENDED BENEFITS OF THE EAIP TO THE STAKEHOLDERS

5.1. Intended benefits to users of an eAIP

(1) possibility to visualise changes, both in text and graphics;

(2) no maintenance effort;

(3) no postal delays, when distributed through the Internet or equivalent private networks; available at hand for the whole company (no need to go to the library);

(4) easy archiving;

(5) proven authenticity of the document (if digitally signed by the issuing AIS).

5.2. Intended benefits to producers of eAIP

(1) better AIP (consistency, integrity, usability);

(2) the majority of the subscribers do no longer ask for paper amendments;

(3) technological leap forward;

(4) reduced risk and cost as compared to isolated development;

(5) reduced costs for internal copies;

(6) easier to create integrated/regional AIPs;

(7) easy archiving (better support for legal proceedings);

(8) possibility to guarantee the integrity and the authenticity of the document by digital signatures.

6. COMPLIANCE TO REGULATION

6.1. Compliance to ICAO regulations

(1) The CCAA eAIP specification is fully compliant with the ICAO requirements for AIP content and structure, as laid down in the Annex 15 to the Convention on International Civil Aviation – Aeronautical Information Services. It provides:

(a) a standardised way to publish the content of Aeronautical Information Publication (AIP) in a structured electronic format;

(b) a recommended way to publish the content of AIP Amendments (AMDT), AIP Supplements (SUP) and Aeronautical Information Circulars (AIC) in a structured electronic format; and

(c) a recommended way to visualise the content of these electronic documents on a computer screen using web technology.

6.2. Testing and Verification

(1) To achieve compliance with the MoC detailed in the CCAA eAIP specification, the mandatory requirements should be implemented and conformance against these tested.

6.3. Transition and coexistence of eAIP and paper AIP

(1) Traditionally, aeronautical information necessary to support international flight was made available by Cameroon AIS and ASECNA, by way of manually typed document, the AIP. However, Cameroon has recognised the importance of aeronautical information as a core component of the future ATM as demonstrated in her plan for the transition from AIS to AIM.

(2) This transition will cause a shift from manual processes, paper-based products and services to automated data processing and digital services. In this new environment, aeronautical data/information is maintained in digital form, from the point of origination through the point of use, be it on-board an aircraft or in an ATM system. With this move, Cameroon has decided to transition to electronic AIP, which will allow end users to visualize most of the AIS information on computer screens.

(3) Moving towards electronic documents introduces new capabilities, such as fast search, hyperlinks, dynamic presentation of changes in text and graphics etc. This also comes with constraints, typically related to the page layout and the encoding format. Former paper documents specifications need to be adapted in the new digital environment.

(4) When the transition is made from paper-based to electronic media, the eAIP provides the following functionality:

(a) The comparison of previous and modified versions, where amendments modify text;

(b) The possible incorporation of links from disseminated versions, for example on CD, to NOTAM on live websites (However, because of their transient nature, NOTAM themselves would not be appropriate for disseminated versions);

(c) The verification of effective dates for each section and where possible, the source of the information;

(d) The linking of cross-references within the body of the text;

(e) The ability to scale and zoom in and out of charts.

1. APPENDIX 1: CONVENTIONS USED IN THE EAIP SPECIFICATIONS

1.1. Introduction

This CCAA eAIP specification provides a minimum subset of requirements necessary for the correct and harmonised implementation of the eAIP. Some recommendations are also made that are optional. The mandatory requirements made within this CCAA eAIP specification document are clearly distinguished from optional recommendations and optional elements. This distinction is made through the details provided in appendix 2 and through the conformity material provided in appendix 3.

1.2. Classification

(1) The conventions for denoting requirements, recommendations and optional elements are as follows:

- "Shall"- indicates a statement of specification, the compliance of which is mandatory to achieve the implementation of CCAA eAIP Specification. Such requirements shall be testable and their implementation auditable.
- "Should"- indicates a recommendation which may or may not be satisfied by all systems claiming conformity to this specification.
- "May"- Indicates an optional element.

(2) In appendix 2 and appendix 3, the requirements are classified into three:

- "M" (Mandatory) for "shall" items;
- "O" (Optional) for "should" or "may" items;
- "C" (Conditional) for items when an optional parent requirement has been implemented. Conditional items provide more detailed requirements/optional elements about how the parent requirement is to be implemented.

1.3. Identification

(1) Every requirement and recommendation in this specification is denoted by an identifier structured in a specific manner. This identifier is used to reference the requirement/recommendation uniquely. These identifiers have the form:

eAIP-[Fn]-[nnn]
where:
- [Fn]: is a sequence of characters to identify the functional area to which the requirement applies. e.g "GEN" for requirements related to the general aspects of the eAIP.
- [nnn]: is a numeric identifier for a sequence of requirements within the same functional area.

(2)   The functional areas referred to in appendix 2 and appendix 3 are:

- GEN: General aspects of the eAIP;
- SRCH: The Search facility;
- HIST: The History page of the eAIP;
- COV: The cover page of the eAIP;
- MENU: the eAIP menu;
- AIPT: The "AIP Table of Contents";
- AMDTT: The AMDT "Table of Contents";
- SUPT: The SUP "Table of Contents";
- AICT: The AIC "Table of Contents";
- HELP: The help facility;
- AIPC: The AIP content;
- AMDTC: The AMDT content;
- SUPC: The SUP content;
- AICC: The AIC content;
- DIST: The Distribution of the eAIP;
- CONF: The client configuration settings.

(3)   In most cases, the requirements are at a high-level and apply to multiple sections and pages of the eAIP. However, it has been necessary to specify requirements for specific section or sections of the eAIP in some cases. This is mainly where these sections are unique in their content or layout.
